Angola Says South Africa Raid Aided Insurgents

LUANDA, Angola - The Angolan government said Wednesday that South Africa had carried out two major air raids on its forces in apparent attempt to blunt an Angolan army drive against antigovernment guerrillas supported by the South Africans. South Africa has said that it sent troops and planes into Angola two days ago to prevent guerrillas of the South African police shoot three persons to death in racial violeuce near Cape Town. Page 2.

France-Presse reported.
The Angolan Defense Ministry said in a communiqué monitored in Lisbon on the official Angolan news agency, ANGOP: "The South African Air Force carried out massive strikes against our units engaged in actions against the puppet bandits of UNITA," 12 miles (19 kilometers) from Mavinga, which is near the anti-government rebels' main base at Jamba. Eight aircraft took part in the first raid and 10 in the second, with the South Africans using Canberra and Mirage planes," the ministry

Colonel Pedro Maria Tonha, the Angolan defense minister, said that the South Africans had acted in support of the UNITA rebels, who have been fighting a guerrilla war since Angola gained independence from Portugal in 1975.

The Angolan media said the move was intended to help UNITA forces resist pressure from government troops and to divert attention from racial unrest in South Africa. Angolan television said that the

Aside from the seven Americans, four Frenchmen and a Briton have also been kidnapped in Lebanon over the last 18 months, Islamic Jihad, a Lebanese guerrilla organization, has claimed to hold most of the hostages and has demanded the release of 17 men imprisoned in Kuwait over bombings of the U.S. and French embassies there.

The United States tried unsuccessfully to gain the release of the seven Americans last July during the hijacking of a TWA airliner in Beirui. The 39 Americans on the plane were freed with Syria's assistance, and, apparently in response, Israel released more than 750 Leba-

Kremlin Expels 6 More Britons, But Truce Apparently Is Called

MOSCOW - The Soviet Union ordered six Britons to leave Wednesday in the fourth round of retaliatory expulsions sparked by the defection of the chief KGB agent in Britain, but apparently a truce has been reached.

In London, the British Foreign Office announced that no more members of the Soviet diplomatic delegation would be expelled. The British ambassador to Moscow, Bryan Cartledge, was summoned to the Soviet Foreign Ministry and told of Wednesday's expulsions, which included five members of the embassy staff and a reporter. The announcement came two days after Britain added six Soviet citizens to a list of 25 expelled last week on suspicion of being spies.

Reagan Says SDI Plan Is Not Negotiable Now

Protectionism Called Threat

By Gerald M. Boyd New York Tunes Service
WASHINGTON — Calling on Congress "to work with me," President Ronald Reagan warned in a nationally televised news confer-ence that "a mindless stampede toward protectionism will be a one-way trip to economic disaster."

The president held firm Tuesday against rising congressional pressures to pass protectionist legisla-tion. He said that such restrictions on trade with the United States could impair economic progress and result in retaliation by other countries that could "deliver an economic death blow" to thousands of American family farms.

Mr. Reagan met on Monday at the White House with congressional leaders, who are developing an omnibus trade bill that would incorporate elements of numerous pending bills and would strengthen the administration's hand in combating unfair trade practices. "We have begun doing many good things for America these last four and a half years," Mr. Reagan said in an opening statement. So let us not place all that progress, all our hopes for the future, at risk by starting down a slippery slope of impulsive acts and imprudent judg-ment. This is a time for cool heads and clear vision."

Research To Go Ahead

By Bernard Weinraub

New York Times Service
WASHINGTON — President Ronald Reagan has ruled our negotiations with the Soviet Union on development and testing of his proposed missile desense in space in exchange for deep cuts in the Soviet nuclear arsenal. At the same time, Mr. Reagan, in a nationally televised news conference, expressed hope that his meeting in November with Mikhail S. Gorbachev, the Soviet leader. would "lead to a change in the relationship" between the United States and the Soviet Union.

Responding to several questions about the meeting in Geneva, Mr. Reagan made it plain that although he ruled out his Strategic Defensive Initiative as a "bargaining chip" in the immediate future, he did not exclude a future bargain once research into the space program was completed.

"There's a great deal of room for negotiation," Mr. Reagan said. His comments occurred in a 36minute question-and-answer ses-sion in the White House East Room, It was the 31st White House news conference of Mr. Reagan's presidency, and the fourth since he was sworn in to a second term in

When he was asked how he reacted to criticism from Congress and both whites and blacks in South Africa regarding sanctions against that country, Mr. Reagan likened himself to a person standing at "a cellophane wall and getting shot at from both sides," adding that this suggested that he was doing something right.

"I must be pretty near the middle." he said.

The president said he had tried to avoid "economic sanctions that would have militated against the people we were trying to help."

Dominating the foreign policy portions of the news conference were the issues of Mr. Reagan's meeting with Mr. Gorbachev in Geneva on Nov. 19 and 20, In advance of the meeting, administration officials have made it plain that a key question remained unre-solved — the possible bargain on space arms in exchange for deep cuts in the Soviet offensive missile force.

Mr. Reagan, looking fit and speaking in a strong voice, referred to his meeting with Mr. Gorbachev on a positive note,

Amid laughter he said, "I wasn't even like each other," Mr. Reagan said. "It's only necessary that we recognize that for the good of the people we represent, on this side of the ocean and over there, that evervone will be better off if we can come to some decisions about the threat of war."

When asked if his program was not leading toward "militarization Mr. de Pinies said that the United Nations does no of the heavens," Mr. Reagan said no and asserted that the Soviet Union was not negotiating properly in Geneva to reduce arms. "We are talking about a weapon that won't kill people," he said of the anti-satellite system. Instead, he said, it will kill weapons.

Asked whether it could be turned to offensive purposes, Mr. Reagan said the purpose of the research program was purely defensive.

Mr. Reagan rejected suggestions that his administration accept a ban on testing and development of anti-satellite weapons. He asserted that the United States was "playing carch-up" with a Soviet program for such weaponry that has already been tested.

"We couldn't stand by." he said, "and allow them to have a monopoly on the ability to shoot down satellites when we are so dependent

Mr. Reagan said vice President George Bush would meet with the families of the remaining six hos-tages in Washington on Friday. Church officials said that Mr. Weir and his family would hold a news conference Thursday.

Mr. Weir was kidnapped in Beirut on May 8, 1984. A native of Salt Lake City, he had lived in Beirut since 1953. Fluent in Arabic, his ob was to funnel aid from the Presbyterian Church into Lebanon.

The other missing Americans and the dates they were kidnapped are: William Buckley, 56, U.S. Em-bassy political officer, March 16, 1984; Peter Kilburn, 60, a librarian at the American University of Beirut, Dec. 3, 1984; the Reverend Lawrence Jenco, 50, a Roman Catholic priest, Jan. 8, 1985; Terry A. Anderson, an Associated Press correspondent, March 16, 1985; David P. Jacobsen, 54, director of the American University hospital, May 28, 1985, and Thomas Sutherland, 53, dean of agriculture at the university, June 9, 1985.

Outburst by Agea at Trial

Wednesday that no orders had been given to French agents to soik the Wednesday that no orders had been given to French agents to soik the Greenpeace ship Rainbow Warrior, but he said that "if I was disobeyed, if I was lied to," he would impose "pitiless sanctions."

Mr. Hernu, who made his statement a day after the newspaper Le

Monde implicated him in the scandal, confirmed reports that he had ordered two agents of the French secret service to gather information on the Greenpeace operation in New Zealand. Le Monde's account said that a different French team had carried out the bombing, and on Wednesday, New Zealand television said that highly placed sources had confirmed

Mr. Hernu said in his statement that "there is an abyss" between gaining information and the murder for which the two agents were being accused in New Zealand. This was a reference to the arrests of the agents in the sinking on July 10 of the Rainbow Warrior, as it was preparing to lead a protest flouilla to the islands of Mururoa and Fangataura, where France carries out its nuclear tests. U.S. Will Test a French AIDS Drug

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The federal government has approved the experimental use of a drug developed in France to light AIDS, the Food and Drug Administration said Wednesday.

Until now the drug, HPA-23; was available only in France. Rock Hudson, the American actor who is a victim of AIDS, or acquired immune deficiency syndrome, flew to France in July for treatment with the drug.

HPA-23 appears to prevent the AIDS virus from reproducing, but does not eliminate it from the patient's body and does not eliminate the immune system suppression that permits AIDS victims to develop a variety of infections and cancers.

Nkomo Held Briefly in Zimbabwe

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) Joshua Nkomo, the opposition leader, was arrested Tuesday and questioned about alleged criminal charges before being released, he said in a telephone interview on Wednesday!

Mr. Nkomo said that his arrest was "deliberate humiliation and harassment" and "part of the government's plan to build up a false case against me."

Mr. Nkomo's homes in Harare and Bulawayo have been raided several times and scores of officials and supporters of his party, the Zimbabwe African People's Union, have been detained indefinitely in a crackdown that began in July. By Karen Turnulty Las Angeles Times Service
WASHINGTON — The U.S. Senate, continuing work on a comprehensive bill to revamp immigration laws, has reversed its earlier stand and approved an amendment that would make it possible for growers of perishable crops to quickly obtain large numbers of legal foreign workers at harvest time.

In a 51-44 vote, the Senate over-turned Tuesday its narrow rejec-tion last week of a similar proposal by Senator Pete Wilson, Republican of California.

The amendment adopted Tuesday was different in that it set an explicit limit on the number of temporary foreign workers who could be admitted under the program at any one time.

The immigration bill, which the Republican-controlled Senate is expected to approve by Thursday, would also offer amnesty and eventual U.S. citizenship to illegal aliens who have lived in the United States continuously since 1980.

Mr. Wilson persuaded five oppo-nents to switch their votes Tuesday when he added a provision to limit the number of foreign workers under the program to 350,000 at any one time. After three years, the al-torney general could adjust the number to conform to the demand

The financial survival of the nation's 53,000 growers of perishable fruits and vegetables, most of whom operate in Western states, could hinge upon passage of the amendment, Mr. Wilson said

But Senator Alan K. Simpson, Republican of Wyoming, the bill's sponsor and the chief opponent of Mr. Wilson's amendment, said the issue was "not survival, but greed." The amendment, Mr. Simpson warned, would mean that farm workers would face "exploitation deluxe, the status quo."

Under Mr. Simpson's bill, em-ployers could be fined up to $10,000 per offense for repeatedly hiring illegal aliens. Western farmers are estimated to rely upon illegal immigration to provide more than half their work force.

Mr. Simpson tried to meet their demands by streamlining the exist-ing program for bringing in foreign seasonal farm labor. However, Western farmers said it still would be too cumbersome to be of much use in harvesting their unpredictable and fragile crops, because it would require them to give 65 days' notice of their needs under normal conditions, or 72 hours under emergency circumstances. It also would allow workers to remain in the United States only a short time after they had completed the jobs for which they were hired. ment would have allowed the attorney general to admit an unlimited number of foreigners, based upon his determination of how many were needed. These workers would then have been allowed to travel from job to job for up to nine months. The measure, which failed 50-48 last week, was vigorously opposed by organized labor and Hispanic groups, which said it was merely a means by which growers could exploit foreign laborers and deny jobs to U.S. citizens who would demand higher pay and better working con-

Mr. Wilson noted that his amendment requires farmers to seek domestic workers before they hire foreign farm labor and to pro-vide housing allowances, insurance and other benefits for their workers. But opponents predicted that farmers would pay httle more than ip service to these stipulations.

Arnoldo S. Torres, a lobbyist for the Arizona Farmworkers Union, said. The claim that this program loesn't displace U.S. farmworkers and protects workers' tights is insulting and disgusting."

U.S. Hoping for Break in Impasse On Middle East With Hussein Visit

Struggling Out of Marxism

Communist China's movement away from its once rigid Marxism to renewed Western attention. At one stroke, the leading patron of reform, Deng Xiaoping, staged the exit of 10 Politburo members and 64 members of the Central Committee. Most are near the 81-yearold Deng's age and will be replaced by technocrats who can ensure the continuity of his country's "second revolution." To measure the scope of the shuffle, recall that another puta-tive Marxist reformer, the Kremlin's Mikhail Gorbachev, has removed only one Politburo member. Deng Xiaoping is serious.

What he is first of all serious about is modernizing China. Seizing power 36 years ago in a despetately poor country, Communists ap-plied Marxism in the Stalinist command-fromthe-top mode that was then dominant, and found it abysmally wanting. Mao Zedong turned to a brutal, low budget model called the Cultural Revolution: another disaster. Phase three finds old war-horse Deng attempting an immense intellectual and political breakthrough to a "socialism" that relies heavily on material incentives, a market economy and an open door to world capital and technology.

The West looks on agog. It is not simply China's size and Mr. Deng's audacity. (Can you believe that the Shanghai stock market

A mass turnover in the leadership brings may reopen?) A Communist country's turn in the direction, at least, of the capitalist road is ideologically satisfying. A political adversary's turn toward a system that would strengthen its common interests with the United States is a geopolitical boon. It is much easier for Americans to indulge their longtime admiration of China's people and culture when China is moving this way.

The road, to be sure, is long. Many party bureaucrats shrink from a change that will shift power to economic managers. Ideologues and traditionalists fear the undermining of established dogma and structure. The military worry about the planned early demobilization of a quarter of the 4-million-man standing army. A historic sensitivity to foreign "exploitation" helps explain some of the lingering coolness to foreign investors. And the inefficiencies of the current system do, after all, spread the available work around.

In the Soviet Union, Mr. Gorbachev chases crooks, tightens discipline in the workplace and cuts down national drinking. He likes the word renewal, but what he is renewing is tight, central authority. For a socialist system, real reform means letting economic power flow from the center toward, if not fully to, the people. That is the fateful course China is on. - THE WASHINGTON POST.

Chief Borrow-and-Spend

When President Reagan took office de-nouncing the national debt, it had not quite reached $1 trillion. In the next 12 months it will pass $2 trillion - $2,000,000,000,000 and still counting. The man who regularly decries "tax-and-spend" Democrats has, in less than five years, earned his Ph.D. in the art of borrow-and-spend. Under current conditions, borrow-and-spend is worse.

Mr. Reagan has certified his dubious debt achievement by asking Congress to raise the debt ceiling to more than $2 trillion. At some point the layman can no longer absorb zeros; the sheer monstrosity of these numbers is hard to grasp. As the president himself might say, trying to make the abstract graphic, two trillion $1 bills laid end to end would reach to Halley's comet and back - and then some.

Openings like that are an invitation for congressional Democrats to scorch the president. Who can blame them? And yet they, too, warrant blame, along with congressional Republicans. They all approved the Reagan budgets that have driven the debt so high.

In any case, sheer monstrosity is not the tormenting problem. What is worrisome is (1) how it gets that way — by borrowing to fi-nance continued huge deficits — and (2) the economic impact. Already this borrowing strains available credit, at home and abroad, keeps interest rates high and crimps private investment. Moreover, growing foreign invest-ment in America's debt commits a slice of America's future growth to paying them off. Finally, consider the self-inflating burden of interest payments on future budgets.

The president's litany of homely anecdotes used to include "a dream" of the day when the government would start to reduce the debt "to prove to our kids that we're not going to dump it all on them." Well, he will not see that day, and the kids had better watch out. If he is disgusted by tax-and-spend, at least that is honest. It means society buys now but also pays now, in present taxes. Borrow-and-spend means it buys now and the kids pay later.

Besides, there is a present cost. Each borrowed billion adds roughly $100 million to interest. Interest on the U.S. national debt alone will rise to almost $150 billion next year. In other words, almost all the money Washington borrows next year will be simply to pay interest on what has been borrowed before.

Mr. Reagan says the remedy is to cut more out of non-military spending. But neither he nor Congress is willing to touch Social Securieven in reasonable ways, and there is little fat left in other domestic spending. Mr. Reagan's response is to denounce the debt — and borrow another $200 billion. One day, "our will see who dumped what on whom.

Other Opinion

Communist China's Best Years

[The current special conference of the Chinese Communist Partyl is an event of key importance in the political and economic life of the whole country at this stage of development. Despite minor snags, the economy is flourishing and people's lives are improving remarkably. Credit for this goes to the reforms, unfolded first in agriculture, then in other fields. On the whole, China is shakin old, rigid economic pattern unsuited to its developing productive forces and is blazing a new path that fully accords with realities in China. A new five-year plan to further the reforms is called for urgently.

In the political field, the party has stressed the importance of promoting young, well edu-cated and professionally competent cadres with revolutionary zeal to guarantee the final success of the current reforms. By now, the readjustment of leading personnel along these lines has been basically completed at the ministerial and provincial levels. The rejuvenation of the party's central leading bodies therefore becomes all the more pressing.

The three-year period following the party's 12th congress in 1982 has been the best since the founding of the People's Republic in terms of economic growth and political stability. To maintain the momentum of such progress, it is now the time to take further major steps. - The China Daily (Beijing).

[Recent changes] reflect China's return to the international arena of politics and commerce and the declining role of the military in a country which is building its future on economic rather than military might.

- The Times (London).

Sweden Puts Off Reassessment

The Swedish electorate has chosen to play safe and stick with the policies - the overriding commitment to social welfare - which have served the country well for half a century. Olof Palme remains one of the few Western leaders who can proclaim an absolute commitment to the pursuit of full employment and the further development of the welfare state with-II losing credibility with the voters.

Mr. Palme may have won the electorate's confidence, but it is increasingly doubtful whether his old-fashioned approach to economic management can rejuvenate Sweden in the 1980s. His re-election postpones the prospect of a fundamental reassessment of economic and social policy in Sweden. Unless Mr. Palme accepts the need for structural reforms which place a higher premium on individual initiative and market mechanisms, the economic stagnation which set in during the late 1970s may prove incurable.

- The Financial Times (London).

Reagan vs. Public Relations?

President Reagan has begun disparaging public relations, the very art that elevated him to two terms as governor of California, two terms as president and his status as the Great Communicator. In more contentious Cold War times, everything the Soviets said was deemed in Washington to be "propaganda." Now, with a long-awaited summit finally set. the White House has cleaned up its vocabulary. The empty promises that the White House sees emanating from the Kremlin are being dismissed as "mere public relations." - Ira R. Allen (United Press International).

1935: Poets Object to Federal Prose

WASHINGTON - America's unemployed poets rose up in revolt against the government's practice of handing their sensitive colleagues jobs of a prosaic nature. "It seems that the cards are stacked and the poets get the joker," observed Earl Cuevas, president of the Poets Laureate League Inc., in an ultimatum sent to Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress Administrator [on Sept. 18]. "Could it be pos-sible that the Administration subscribes to the hackneyed and conventional lie that poets must experience privation and hardships to produce masterpieces?" Cuevas revealed that the Poets League had submitted a project to the relief authorities but had failed to win approval. "We have been informed that the poets who are on relief, if employed, will be assigned such tasks as compiling directories."

Deng's Revolution: Leading Toward Political Sense

W ASHINGTON — Great leaders generally leave succession crises of their own making. "Caesar," as the proverb goes, "has no heirs." But Deng Xiaoping is bent on breaking the mold. His systematic attempt to organize a smooth succession distinguishes him as a leader among leaders. It also reflects the obsessively personal quality that has debased Chinese politics, and the country itself, for much of the past century.

By any standard, Mr. Deng ranks high among rulers now in power. Where the most celebrated figures play confidence games with the appearance

f things, he comes to grips with fundamentals.

The campaign to modernize China means a enuine economic revolution: withdrawing the visible hand of government to leave scope for the invisible hand of the market. Few developing countries - not Brazil, Mexico, Indonesia or even India, as yet -have had the stuff to persist in such a course. In China the new policy has yielded predictable troubles — glaring inequality, gross corruption, inflation. Still Mr. Deng advances.

Ideological changes of a similarly sweeping nature have accompanied the shifts in economic policy. Almost imperceptibly, the cult of Mao was jettisoned. Pictures of the Great Helmsman, once in every public place, are now a curiosity. Marxism has been similarly diluted. With the iron framework gone, individuality has asserted itself in dress, the arts and entertainment. Chinese society, although far from free, is taking in light and air.
As a force in world politics. China has inevitably been weakened by drastic internal reform. The People's Liberation Army got a bloody nose when it moved to teach the Vietnamese a lesson back in 1978. Almost no one today thinks of Beijing as a capital on the level of Washington or Moscow. Still, by skillful maneuvering Mr. Deng has been By Joseph Kraft able to play off the Big Two. He is now heading for a closer relation with the Soviet Union. At the a closer relation with the Soviet Union. At the same time he is prying assistance in training, high technology and weapons out of the United States. The negotiation that forced Britain to cede Hong Kong back to China was a striking victory for Mr. Deng over a supposed Iron Lady. Few modern leaders can have enjoyed such a diplomatic success. He allowed himself to ride in triumph through Beijing after the deal was announced.

It was a rare bit of showmanship. For Mr. Deng's achievements have been accomplished from a base of near anonymity. He has deliberately avoided the power posts of high visibility that he once sought — boss of the party, or head of the government. Instead he has operated behind the scenes from the office of deputy prime minister.

Deng seeks the rationalization of politics. He is not there yet.

One result is great uncertainty on the outside about what goes on in Chinese politics. Almost surely a debate rages as to the bounds of liberalizing the Chinese economy, and there must be bitter rguments about how close to draw to the Soviet Union. In the past, hints of rival positions emerged through Aesopian allusions to obscure dramas or the classics of Chinese literature. Now debates stay inside until Mr. Deng discloses the outcome. About trying to organize the succession, Mr. Deng is clarity itself. He has called it "a central mission ... a task of century-long significance." Already he has installed proteges as head of the party (General Secretary Hu Yaobang) and head of government (Prime Minister Zhao Ziyang). He has their successors waiting in the wings.

At the first of a series of party meetings in Beijing, Mr. Deng prepared the way for the third echelon. A sweeping purge retired 10 of the 24 Politburo members, and 64 of the 340 members of the Central Committee which elects the Politburo were retired. Among those dropped were many known as opponents of Mr. Deng. Presumably,

Dengists will take their places when the new Central Committee elects a new Politburo next week.

The final outcome of Mr. Deng's battle to name his followers will probably not be known even then. Some Deng proteges have not been glowing successes. Whether the third-echelon leaders are pure Dengists or not remains uncertain.

For Mr. Deng has been led to concentrate on the political future precisely because the political past has been so stormy. In retrospect, it is clear that many of the great campaigns of yore — from the Great Leap Forward to the Cultural Revolution were vehicles for personal rivalries developed over the decades of the long march to power of the Chinese Communists. Thousands of lives were lost and millions of casualties caused. Mr. Deng's own son became a paraplegic when he was thrown out of a building during the Cultural Revolution. Mr. Deng himself, as he recently reminded an American visitor, was twice removed from power.
What Mr. Deng has in mind is an ending of the settling of scores that made China a nation driven by demons. He is aiming at the rationalization of Chinese politics. He is not there yet, but if he succeeds, he will indeed hold a permanent place in the pantheon of world leadership.

America's 'Age of Liberation' Seems to Be Over

WASHINGTON - The evidence is accumulating that

 By 1982, the steady increase in female teenage premantal intercourse had stopped, according to the National Center for Health Statistics. More recently, syphilis is down 30 percent from 1982 — a vivid contrast with a rise of 50 percent in the preceding five years. (One factor, but not necessarily the only one, is fear of genital herpes and AIDS.) The change is pro-found. As one expert put it, "You have to believe that behavior patterns have changed substantially throughout the country. The number of abortions leveled off starting in 1981, after roughly doubling from 1973 to 1979, according to the Alan Gutt-macher Institute. The abortion rate declined for the first time in 1982. That may have resulted from greater sexual abstinence or from greater revulsion toward abortion, or both. By Michael Barone

The divorce rate declined from 22.8 percent in 1979 to 21.7 percent in 1982 ending a long-term upward havior, consumption habits and so-trend. The absolute number of divorces also declined. Alcohol use is way down. The liquor industry is notoriously in trouble, and beer consumption continues a long-term decline. Even wine sales are languishing. • Tobacco use among men in 1984 was 35 percent, down from 52 percent in 1964; among women it was 29 percent, down from a peak of 34 percent. In 1984, teenage smoking declined more than it had in 20 years; 19 percent smoked, down from 29 percent in 1977. The statistics on marijuana use are not very reliable, but they point in one direction: Use is down. The National Institute on Drug Abuse says that marijuana use among youths aged 12 to 17 declined from 17 to 12 percent between 1979 and 1982, and use among young adults aged 18 to 25 declined from 35 to 27 percent. Surveys of college youth find similar trends.

• Crime rates have dropped sharply in the 1980s. The FBI index of major crimes was down 10 percent between 1980 and 1983; the Justice Department's National Crime Survey found crimes against households down 13 percent in the same period. This happened even though the number of males aged 15 to 24 is down only 4 percent. And prison populations are way up, from 196,000 in 1972 to 463,000 in 1984. Restraint is being exercised: either self-restraint by young men who would have committed crimi-

Blushing Is Overdue for a Comeback

WASHINGTON — Here is a W question that might make you blush: What makes you blush? When considering the campaign against "porn rock" — vulgar and obscene lyries in rock music — consider that question, and also this one: Would you want to live in a world in which no one blushed? Various American parents' groups are putting wholesome pressure on recording companies, radio stations and the makers of rock videos to exercise discretion and selfrestraint. Approximately one-third of U.S. radio stations have rock formats, and many are behaving responsibly. But the sort of people who profit from aggressively marketing porn rock have the morals of the marketplace, and the market-place is the place to get their attention. In addition, putting labels on records with vulgar lyrics is going to help parents exercise supervision. Rock music has become a plague of messages about sexual promiscuity, bisexuality, incest, sado-masochism, satanism, drug use, alcohol abuse and, constantly, misogyny. The lyrics are celebratory, encouraging or at least desensitizing. By making these subjects the common currency of popular entertainment, the lyrics drain the subjects of their power to shock - their power to make people blush. The concern is less that children will emulate the frenzied behavior described in porn rock than that they will succumb to the lassitude of the demoralized literally, the de-moralized

As people become older they be-come less given to blushing. This is in part because they lose that sweet softness of vouthful character that is called innocence and makes one's sensibilities subject to shock. People blush for various reasons. Sometimes it is because we have embarrassing attention called to ourselves. Sometimes we blush when alone, when we think of something about ourselves that is shaming.

By George F. Will

Often people blush because they are exposed to something that should be private or is shameful. This may be an endangered species of blushing as omnipresent vulgari-ties like porn rock make even the vilest things somehow banal. Walter Berns, the political philosopher, asks: What if, contrary to Frend and much conventional wisdom, shame is natural and shamelessness is acquired? If so, the acqui-sition of shamelessness through the shedding of "hang-ups" is an important political event. There is a link between self-restraint and shame. An individual incapable of shame and embarrassment is probably incapable of the governance of the self. A public incapable of embarrassment about public vulgarity is unsuited to self-government.

There is an upward ratchet effect in the coarsening of populations. Today's American 12-year-olds cannot enjoy - can hardly sit still for - the kind of 1950s Westerns that enthralled their fathers. Today's 12-year-olds are so addicted (that is not too strong a word) to the slam-bang nonstop roar of Steven Spielberg movies that their atten-tion is not held by, say, John Wayne in "She Wore a Yellow Ribbon." The social atmosphere is heavily dosed with sexuality, from the selling of blue jeans to the entertaining of television audiences. Thus it is perhaps reasonable to have feelings of fatalism. Perhaps societies, like rivers, run naturally downhill. Perhaps the coarsening of a public is irreversible, especially when the coarsening concerns a powerful and pleasurable appetite such as sex. But it is not true that societies cannot move away from coarseness to-ward delicacy of feeling. In the first half of the 18th century, the dawn of the Age of Reason, a form of English merriment on Guy Fawkes nights was to burn an effigy of the pope. The effigy's belly was filled with cats whose howls of agony in the flames were supposed to represent the voice of the devil emanating from the Catholic Church. That kind of cruelty to animals is, by today's standards, obscene. Sensibilities can change for the better. So fatalism is wrong and the porn rock fight is worth fighting.

Mass culture, especially music, matters. Nothing is more striking to a young parent than the pull of popular culture on even 4-year-olds. Perhaps good music can make good values more adhesive to children. People can reasonably argue about what is the second finest work of music - a Mozart concerto, a Beethoven symphony, this or that Bach tune. But everyone knows that the acme of the art of music is the currently popular song that says, "Put me in, coach, I'm ready to play ... Look at me, I can be centerfield." America has a lighting chance as long as porn rock can be rivaled by baseball rock.

ual decisions of millions of ordinary people. Men and women who were liberating themselves from con-straints a decade ago are delaying gratification and imposing restraints on themselves and others. Why? A better question is, Why not? The historian Lawrence Stone. in "The Family, Sex and Marriage in England, 1500-1800," argues that people in England became more restrictive in the late 1500s, more permissive after the Restoration of 1660, and more restrictive again beginning around 1770. "Historical change is not a one-way street."

Writing in the middle 1970s, Mr.

Stone foresaw the cycle of history "revolving once more." As the ex-cesses and costs of liberation become plain, people apply restraint.
In the America of 1975-1985, the excesses often appeared as threats to health. Scotch and steaks (consumption of red meat is way down. too), cigarettes and marijuana all once seemed the emblems of the affluent, liberated life, but now they are perceived as dangerous. Americans have discovered, often tragically, what the history of venereal diseases should have told them: that whether it should or not, nature has a bias against promiscuous sex. Lewis Thomas tells how the development of penicillin in 1938 meant that physicians for the first time could cure many diseases thought incurable. Americans came to think that there was a pill that could cure any illness and a device -a contraceptive, a shot, whatever -that could guarantee pleasurable risk-free sex. Now they are learning the limits that our physical nature imposes on behavior, and the penalties it exacts for excess.

People may be learning as well the limits our spiritual nature im-poses — that it is not always best in the long run to maximize pleasure or freedom in the short run. As a society, Americans are not eager to intrude in people's lives, but they are increasingly willing to penalize what they were reluctant a lew years ago to regard as misconduct. Witness recent laws to imprison drunk drivers, track down fathers delinquent in child-support payments, ban smoking in public places and curb pornography. Advocates of abortion, who once portrayed it as socially beneficial

(see the first paragraphs of Justice Harry Blackmon's opinion in Roc vs. Wade, 1973), now argue for it as a lesser evil for people faced with anguishing dilemmas (see the 1985 ad campaign of the National Abortion Rights Action League).

Even so, Americans continue to talk as if they were in an Age of Liberation Advocates of liberation want to keep fighting and not admit that their tide is ebbing; advocates of restraint have a stake in arguing that battles are still to be fought. Some surely are, but the evidence is accumulating. America seems already to be in an Age of Restraint. The Washington Post.

A Coalition To Loosen, At the UN

By Daniel P. Moynihan from New York, was chief U.S. delegate to the United Nations in 1975 and 1976. This is the second of two articles:

W ASHINGTON — The coels tion of the nonaligned and Soviet blocs is not without a measure of coercion. Generally speaking, Moscow can do little for the nonaligned, but it can do things to them. Most Third World states have a Communist Party that can be set off like a cos bomb, at minimum breaking a lot of glass and killing people.

America's task is to break up this coalition. There needs to be some realignment among the nonaligned. This cannot be that hard: They have so few real interests in common. Yet it will not happen until the United States learns to pay attention to voting at the United Nations.

Allow as an example a recent meet-

Attow as an example a recent meeting in Beijing with Deng Xiaoping. Seven U.S. senators made up a delegation headed by the majority leader, Bob Dole. We were there to discuss trade and other such matters, especially the recently signed nuclear cooperation agreement. There are morning interests but also have problem. tual interests, but also huge problems in giving nuclear technology to a to-talitarian Communist state.

No doubt such problems occurred to President Reagan's negotiators but it is doubtful that the United Nations even entered the calculations. We senators decided to mise the subject. The task fell to me. Mr. Deng made it easier by stating at the outset that in our exchanges there would be "no need to use diplomatic." language." Our relationship, he said, had "entered a new stage." it was unimaginable for it not to be friendly.

I responded that indeed our bilateral relations had reached a level of great cordiality. Yet we were troubled by the contrast between these relations one-on-one, and those in inter-national forums. These could not be described as cordial. It was, I said, as if China had a "two United States policy." Last year China had voted against the United States 89 percent of the time — by far the most ania.

American record Beijing has ear compiled at the United Nations.

There was a further matter. The State Department had compiled the records of 20 "name-calling" votes in the last General Assembly. These arise when some particularly nasty reference to the United States is slipped into a resolution, usually by the Soviet Union. In not one of those 20 votes had China been with Ameri-ca. Instead (with three absences) it invariably voted with the Soviet Union. We found this difficult to understand and in the circumstances mwelcome. Senator Pete Wilson of California asked how we were to explain this to constituents when the muclear agreement came before us?
Mr. Deng concluded the meeting by stating. "We have taken into reference the views of Congress."

Query: Will the State Department do so? Not these particular views, but the general perspective that U.S. bilateral relations with a particular nation are necessarily affected by the attitudes toward America in international settings? In all the official briefing materials on China prepared for us in Washington, there was not a line about the United Nations.

Will we Americans ever break out of this pattern? Not, certainly, until we face up to our own weakness. We are an old country, accustomed to one-on-one relations - Benjamin Franklin at the Court of Louis XVI. Multilateral diplomacy, new to us, is the only kind most nations know, and frankly they outperform us.

It is possible to learn these new politics and to learn from them. It cannot be altogether the Russians' fault that America is so relatively isolated. Still, it is time some cost was imposed on mindless, reflexive hostility to America at the United Nations. A thought: A quarter-century ago, Washington decided to open an embassy in every new nation. A fine gesture, but it did not improve Amerca's standing with all those nation It would do no harm to close a few of them. Let those governments pick up their foreign aid not in their capital cities but at the U.S. mission in New York. It would provide an opportunity to talk politics off the floor, as we say in the Senate. The United Nations needs a victory, which will only come if the United States redeems some of its former influence.

Intellectuals Stay Busy

As an observer of the New York scene in the 1940s and a faithful read: er of the Partisan Review at the time, I commend James Atlas for "Exercising the Intellect in New York" (Insights, Sept. 5). But not all his conclusions convince me. Literary criticism may be out at the moment, but intellectuals do not restrict themselves to a particular aspect of intellectual means be it politics, the arts or the sciences. To them the thought processes are the first concern of human existence. I assume the species will not die out.

Deng Xiaoping and some other old leaders will continue to function in the party's central leading organs." Mr. Zhu said. Mr. Hu, 69, reinforced the point in his speech, as reported by the Xinhua news agency. "It is in response to the needs of the party's cause that most veterans have retired. It is also in response to the needs of the party's cause that a few of them have remained." Mr. Hu told delegates that a fifth plenum of the 12th Central Committee will convene immediately after the conference to name "a number of younger people" to the Politburo and party Secretariat. Politburo and Secretariat mem-bers are taken from the Central ommittee, which previously had 210 full members and 136 alternates. The election of 90 new members, to replace 65 veterans, would expand the total membership from 346 to 371. Prime Minister Zhao Ziyang told the conference that the five-year plan for 1986-1990 calls for economic growth of 7 percent a year, below the 10 percent average in 1981-1984, with concentration on economic efficiency and exports. Mr. Zhao identified major tasks for 1986-1990 as reform of the economic structure, key construction projects, upgrading technology, developing intellectual resources and improving living standards. Economic reform is most vital, he said.

Meanwhile, about 1,000 Chinese student protesters screaming "down with Japanese militarism" marched through Beijing's Tienan-men Square Wednesday to commemorate the 54th anniversary of lapan's invasion of China.

The students said they were protesting what they call a resurgence of Japanese militarism and arrogance, pointing to the visit of Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone of Japan to a Tokyo shrine commemorating Japan's war dead.

Elsewhere, several thousand students at the Beijing University campus gathered in a similar demonstration, visiting faculty sources there told The Associated Press. By one account, several anti-Japanese wall posters were pasted on a long wall near the campus post office, and one depicted Japan as an alligator ready to swallow China. Japan invaded northeastern China on Sept. 18, 1931, and occupied much of the country before World

Tokyo Sets Spending on Military Over 1% of GNP

By John Burgess Washington Post Service TOKYO — The Japanese cahinet adopted Wednesday a $76-billion, five-year military spending plan that could bring an end to official policy that has held military budgets to 1 percent of gross national product.

Based on current projections of GNP by the government's Eco-nomic Planning Agency, the plan would mean average yearly mili-tary spending of about 1.04 percent of GNP, which is the total value of a nation's output of goods and ser-

Despite these figures, the chief cabinet secretary, Takao Fujinami, said that the government would continue to make efforts to respect the intent" of the 1-peacent ceiling, which was adopted in 1976.

Officials in Tokyo have fended off questions about the seeming contradiction between these two policies. However, the question could become academic if Japan's economy grows faster than expected, so that actual spending remained below I percent.

Earlier this month, ruling party elders turned down a request from Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone to scrap the spending ceiling formally. But as a compromise, they approved creation of the five-year cabinet spending plan.

Formerly, the plan was an internal "wish list" of the Defense Agency, subject to heavy cuts by the Diet, Japan's parliament, during budget deliberations. Its elevation to a cabinet policy appears to assure it will carry greater weight. Meanwhile, the lead opposition group, the Japanese Socialist Party, called the government's decision "outrageous" and promised to fight it when the Diet reconvenes. Other opposition parties also con-

Mr. Fujinami pledged that Japan would maintain a "strictly defen-sive" posture and would not become a military power. His remarks apparently were aimed both at neighboring countries that Japan occupied during World War II and anti-military Japanese. The government also said Wednesday that it intends to increase foreign economic assistance in stages to about $8 billion in 1992, from an estimated $4 billion

The military spending plan is not expected to change the basic speed and direction of the continuing buildup of Japan's 245,000-member armed forces Despite Japan's economic success, its government is short of cash and running a deficit that is proportionately larger than that of the United States. About 20 percent of Japan's national budget is financed delense spending a financial as well as political issue. The action Wednesday followed all-night bargaining within the gov-ernment. The Defense Agency, which is in charge of military af-fairs, had pressed for spending equivalent to about $80 billion but backed down in the face of opposition from the Finance Ministry and parts of the ruling Liberal Democratic Party.

Samora Machel with Secretary of State George P. Shultz after his arrival in Washington.

Mozambican Leader's Visit to U.S. Prompts Right to Criticize Reagan

By Doyle McManus

Lin Angeles Times Service WASHINGTON - Amid cries of anger from conservatives, the Marxist president of Mozambique. Samora Machel, has arrived in Washington for talks with President Ronald Reagan aimed at cementing improved ties with the United States and at winning new aid for his leftist government.

The administration's cordial relationship with President Machel appears at odds with Mr. Reagan's ial rhetoric on the Third World. In this case, the United States is supporting a Soviet-backed Marxist dictatorship against a pro-Western rebellion.

The United States is supplying Mr. Machel's government with $40 million in economic aid this year. Congress turned down an adminis-tration request for $1.1 million in military aid.

Mr. Reagan and other officials said that Mr. Machel, who arrived Tuesday, has helped U.S. attempts to calm tensions between whiteruled South Africa and its black neighbors. The officials voiced hope that he can be wooed away from his close relationship with the Soviet Union.

tine" of the region in question. But conservative Republican have complained that aid for Mozambique was inconsistent with Mr. Reagan's policies in Nicaragua, Alghanistan and Cambodia, where the administration has been aiding rebels against leftist govern-ments. They called on the president to aid the rightist Mozambican National Resistance, which has been fighting to overthrow Mr. Machel's government.

Lawrence Eagleburger, a former undersecretary of state.

The U.S. effort will enable the rebels to disseminate the message to the world of what is going on there," said Senator Gordon J. Humphrey, a New Hampshire Republican, who proposed the idea to Congress. "The Soviets, unfortunately, have largely succeeded in their efforts of hiding that war from the people of the world and from world opinion," he said.

Mr. Humphrey, who says the Reagan administration has failed to provide enough assistance to the anti-Soviet guerrillas, told the Senate in June that the project had been cleared with the National Seernment which has ruthlessly sup- curity Council. Congress's understanding is that the administration may ask for another $500,000.

Algae, encapsulated in silica gel, collect gold from water even when they are dead, said Benjamin Greene, a member of the research team. They also work when concentrations of gold in water are very small. "Over 90 percent of the gold from a test solution was removed even though the gold was in the part-per-billion range," said Dr. Dennis W. Darnall, who directed the research.

Recyclable algae-based gel costs much less than the resins now used to remove metals from waste water, and algae are more selective, the researchers said. "You can easily adjust the acidity and salt content so you get only gold," Dr. Darnall said. "With conventional resins, you tend to get a mix of metals." American to Fill Koestler Chair

E DINBURGH — An American will fill Britain's first professorial chair in parapsychology. Dr. Robert Mortis, 42, said he would expose fraud where he found it, and approach his job with such scientific rigor that he might make it disappear.

Dr. Morris, a senior research scientist at Syracuse University in New York, was chosen from about candidates to become the first Koestler professor of parapsychology at the University of Edinburgh as of Dec. 1.

The position was established with a bequest from Arthur Koestler, the novelist, critic and explorer of the supernatural who committed suicide with his wife in 1983. It is believed to be the only professorial chair in parapsychology outside of K. Miller, are trying to counter the University of Utrecht in the earthquake vibrations by releasing Netherlands.

Although prices in tables on these pages are from the 4 P.M. close in New York, for time reasons, this article is based on the market at 3 P.M.

Declines led advances by a 3-2 ratio among the 1,935 issues traded.

Five-hour volume amounted to about 88,311,100 shares, compared with 89,490,000 in the same period Tuesday.

Analysis said the market remains fragile, per-vaded by overwhelmingly bearish semiment. Keith Hertell of Merrill Lynch noted that weakness in Merck stock pressured the Dow Jones industrial average, which was down near-ly nine points at midday. Traders said Merck's stock was weak due to adverse comments by an E.F. Hutton analyst concerning a Merck heart drug.

Mr. Hertell said very negative reactions to any kind of bad news reveals even more clearly the fragility of the market.

"Recent carnage throughout the marketplace has terrified everybody," said Robert Kahan, head of equity trading at Montgomery Securities in San Francisco. "The mood is somber and people are extremely bearish. They have no inclination to buy stocks," he said.

Analysts said the government's report that U.S. housing starts rose 6.2 percent in August was unsurprising and had no impact on trading. "The question is, can the market improve from an oversold condition?" said Larry Wachtel, of Prudential Bache Securities. New Cash Poses Problems For Some Mutual Funds

By VARTANIG G. VARTAN

New York Times Service EW YORK — In mid-May, Vanguard Group of Investment Cos. suspended the sale of shares to new investors in the Windsor Fund, the largest equity investors in the Windsor Fund, the largest equity mutual fund in the United States, after net assets had can grow too large," said John C. Bogie, Vanguard's chairman. Windsor's enviable problem was an overabundance of fresh cash. In the six months ended April 30, $700 million in new money flowed into the fund, which is managed by John B. Neff, in Valley Forge, Pennsylvania. "We would prefer to take the prudent view that future growth should be controlled," said Mr. Neff, who has carved out an excellent performance pecord.

Over the years, many funds have been forced to suspend sales to new holders.

Both Windsor and Windsor II use a value-oriented strategy that emphasizes stocks with low price-earnings ratios.

They are also part of the Vanguard Group, which markets and distributes 34 different funds with assets totaling $14.4 billion. Vanguard hires independent managers to run portfolios of most equity funds that sail under its flag. This differs from the more typical approach, whereby a mutual fund group handles both marketing and investment management functions on an in-house basis. The new fund, Windsor II, has been in operation since late DUT isn't there a sense of intramural competition now in play between Windsor and Windsor II? James Barrow, Windsor II's portfolio manager and a partner in the Dallas firm, which also manages some $2 billion in assets for institutional investors, fends off that question.

"I don't have any sense of competition," he said on Monday. "I don't watch the Windsor portfolio. In fact, I don't even know what John Neff owns."

Vanguard has just made public the portfolios of the two funds showing their equity holdings as of July 31. On inspection, there seems little overlap.

seems little overlap.

In Neff's Windsor Fund, the 10 largest common stock investments as of the latest reporting date were Exxon Corp.; First Interstate Bancorp; Nynex Corp.; Texas Utilities Co.; US West Inc.; Ford Motor Co.; General Motors Corp.; Royal Dutch/Shell Group; Shell Transport & Trading Co.; and Tenneco Inc. Windsor II, according to Mr. Barrow, expects to follow a policy of remaining substantially fully invested. Its 10 biggest holdings as of July 31 were Union Carbide Corp.; Chrysler Corp.; Borg-Warner Corp.; K mart Corp.; Sears, Roebuck & Co.; Philip Morris Cos.; Burroughs Corp.; Southwestern Bell Corp.; Consolidated Natural Gas Co.; and Colt Industries Inc. and GM, as well as Royal Dutch, and Shell Transport. For the three years to June 30, records indicate that the Windsor Fund and the Dallas investment firm have been pretty evenly matched in performance.

According to Computer Directions Advisors, of Silver Spring, Maryland, Mr. Neff's Windsor Fund showed a total return of 132.8 percent in the period, compared with 129.5 percent for institutional accounts managed by Barrow, Hanley, Mewhinney & Strauss. Building Starts Up In U.S.

Signs of Revival Seen in 6.2% Rise

The Associated Presi

WASHINGTON - U.S. housing construction in August posted its best gain in five months, a 62-percent increase which analysts said Wednesday provided further evidence that the economy is finally showing signs of a revival.

The Commerce Department said construction of new homes and apartments rose to a seasonally adrate of 1.75 million units in August, reversing a 3.2-percent July decline.

It was the biggest increase in housing activity since a 14.7-per-cent March advance.

The report on housing was the latest in a series of relatively bright August economic statistics. Unem-ployment declined for the first time in six months while industrial production and retail sales showed gains last month.

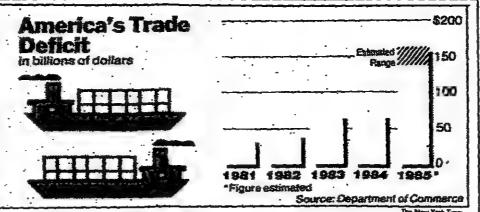

The commerce secretary, Malcolm Baldrige, said the new report showed not only a rise in actual construction but a gain in building permits, a good barometer of fu-ture activity. "I expect further moderate gains in building activity," he said.

Economists had been mystified as to why dramatic declines in mortgage rates since last year did not seem to be triggering a big crease in sales and construction activity. But they said the latest report should show that the gains were just delayed.

Kent Colton, executive vice president of the National Association of Home Builders, said home sales may be rising because home buyers may be alraid that mortgage rates have dropped as far as they will.

"We don't see any reason to think mortgage rates will do much of anything. Is Growing U.S. Protectionist View A Real Threat to World Economy?

By Leonard Silk New York Times Service

NEW YORK - After pursuing a free-trade policy for the past 50 years, the U.S. Congress is seriously considering protectionist measures of the sort contained in the damaging Smoot-Hawley tariff act of 1930, which many economists believe helped to create the Great Depression. There is much perplexity about the strength of protectionist sentiment in Congress — and much anxiety over the danger that, if it prevails, the United States would again provoke retaliation and start a trade war that would inflict grave damage on its economy and that of the world. Could this happen again, or has the danger been greatly overblown? Supporters of restrictive trade legislation today insist that they are not trying to start a trade war but seek only to protect U.S. labor, industry and agriculture from unfair competition.

What their intentions are and what the results would be, however, may be two different things. Most trade experts believe that the danger of serious protective measures taken by the United States is a real danger and that such measures could indeed spark some kind of trade war. But they add that its disastrous economic effects could be tempered if the United States and other countries undertake strong spending programs or other expansionary moves In 1930 the supporters of Smoot-Hawley in-

After Herbert Hoover was elected president, Congress wrote a trade bill that steeply increased tariffs not only on farm imports but also on virtually all other imports. When Smoot-Hawley reached the president's desk 1.038 U.S. economists — including just about every reputable economist of whatever political view - signed a petition urging him to veto the bill.

Saudis Starting To Raise Output, Sources Report

By Peter Behr

Washington Pust Service
WASHINGTON -- Saudi Arahia has begun to increase its oil production, breaking with the rest of the oil cartel in a move that is expected to force another drop in world prices.

According to informed sources, Saudi Arabia will produce an extra million barrels daily by the end of the month. This would raise Saudi output to 3.5-million barrels daily.
The bulk of the additional Saudi production will be sold to four American companies — Exton Corp., Mobil Corp., Texaco Inc. and Shell Oil Co. — although none of the companies would comment. The Saudis reportedly have negoti-ated so-called netback contracts in which the price for crude is determined by the market prices for gasoline, heating oil and other prod-

The action is seen by U.S. energy analysis as an unprecedented attempt to force other members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to honor pricing agreements.

The strategy could push oil prices down by $2 to $4 a barrel by next spring, depending on the de-mand for beating oil over the winter, oil company officials said. That would be comparable to a 5- to 10cent-a-gallon reduction in gasoline and fuel-oil prices.

On the spot market Wednesday, Saudi Arabia's Arab light crude was quoted at $27.25, down from $27.45 Tuesday and the official price of $28. A more widely traded crude, Britain's North Sea Brent. was quoted at $26.65 for November delivery.

There is an outside chance, how ever, that other OPEC producers will attempt to match the Saudi production increase, triggering an escalating price war.

A sudden drop of any magnitude could have dire consequences for some heavily indebted U.S. oil companies, for Third World oil producers such as Mexico, Venezuela and Nigeria, for the U.S. and European banks that have billions of dollars in loans outstanding to these countries and to the tragile military balance in the Gulf.

Speculation widened following remarks by the Saudi oil minister, Ahmed Zaki Yamani, at Oxford, England. The OPEC news agency said Saturday he had warned a pri-vate seminar of the dangers of a price war that could push prices down to $15 to $18 a barrel after the winter "if non-OPEC producers do not cooperate with the organization and we in OPEC do not discipline ourselves."

There are various versions of the possibility of such a price war.

"The conventional wisdom is that the Saudis are bluffing and the markets are disregarding what Ya-mani is saying," said John C. Sa-whill, a partner with the consulting firm McKinsey & Co. and former deputy secretary of the U.S. De-partment of Energy. "My view is that the Saudis are really serious this time." Peter C. Beutel, an analyst with Rudolf Wolff Futures Inc. in New York, does not believe the odds of a price war are very great, but the action will affect the situation in their commercial bank debt.

Further, six of the countries have developed to the point where they through its new spur of the Trans Saudi pipeline next month, adding

> "I think it's kind of hard to predict where the price is going at this stage," said B. M. Thompson, a vice president of Phillips Petroleum

New York Times Service SAN FRANCISCO — Sleven P. Jobs has resigned as chairman of Apple Computer Inc., severing his last ties with the company he cofounded in a garage in 1976.

"I submitted my resignation in no uncertain terms," Mr. Jobs, said Tuesday night. He said he resigned because the Apple board had made his plans to start a company "into a very hostile situation."

Mr. Jobs transmitted his resigna-tion in a letter to A.C. Markkula Jr., vice chairman of the board. Apple spokesmen said neither the company nor Mr. Markkula had received the letter. But Mr. Markkula, in a statement issued by the company, said the board was continuing to evaluate what action it would take with regard to Mr. Jobs. "As chairman of the board, Steve

Mr. Jobs's account differed from that offered by Apple. He said he told the board of his plans Thursday and indicated he would bring some Apple people with him. He said he offered to resign at that time. The board excused him from the meeting and when he returned, told him they wanted him to remain chairman and even wanted to invest 10 percent in his company.

The resignation is the culmination of a series of events in which Mr. Jobs, 30, has increasingly lost his power in a dispute with Mr. Sculley, whom Mr. Jobs hired from But Minebea's president. Ta rienced management to Apple.

U.S., EC Begin Talks On Steel Import Pact

NEW LOWS 56

WASHINGTON — The United States has begun talks with the European Community to try and extend a steel import agreement that U.S. producers say is critical to providing the import relief envisioned in a plan by the Reagan administration administration.

The existing pact, which was signed in 1982, covers such broad steel product categories as hot- and cold-rolled sheet and heavy structurals. While the agreement expires at the end of 1985, U.S. negotiators headed by Joseph Papovich of the office of Clayton Yeutter, the U.S. trade representative, have set a target date of Oct. 31 to wran up the talks.

"We expect the negotiations to go up until that final day," said Desiree Tucker, a spokeswoman for Mr. Yeutter. "We just expect them The 10 nations of the EC account for about one-quarter of all steel imports into the United States. The 1982 agreement limited shipments of major European steel product lines to 5.4 percent of the U.S. market.

Private talks were scheduled for Tuesday and Wednesday in Washington before shifting to Brussels next week. The EC delegation is head-ed by Jean-Pierre Leng, who specializes in in-

"We are going to be listening to what the U.S. wants us to do," said Ella Krucoff, a spokes-woman for the EC. "They are the demandants, the ones looking for restrictions." She characterized the first few days as "exploratory."

Kodak claims the machines are the first of their kind. U.S. steelmakers have said that extension—and expansion—of the pact is crucial to the success of President Ronald Reagan's plan, annuced last year, to reduce the foreign share of the U.S. steel market from about 25 percent to be used to be us about 18.5 percent. So far, agreements have been reached with 14 steelexporting nations, including Japan, which itself accounted for nearly 7 percent of the U.S. market in 1984. first of their kind. The company also announced plans for a new line of camerarecorders, similar to the products

"These negotiations are absolutely critical to the success, and even the survival, of the president's steel program promulgated last September," said a briefing paper circulated to Congress this week by the American Iron and Steel Institute. "Since 1977, the EC has been the domestic industry's most intractable foreign

Compiled by Our Stuff From Dispatcher NEW YORK — Citicorp, the largest U.S. bank holding company, said Wednesday that it had realigned its management and corporate structure to enable it to capitalize on global growth oppor-tunities.

Citicorp's' chairman, John S. Reed, said the changes were needed to adapt the corporate structure to the rapid changes in the global cap-ital markets. The announcement, which had been expected marks the first major shakeup at the banking company since Mr. Reed became chairman in June 1984.

The structural changes include moving the company's treasury operations from the investment bank division to the commercial hank sector. These operations include

TOKYO - Suntory Ltd., Japan's largest producer of wines and spirits, agreed Wednesday with Château Lafite to distribnte the French vintner's wines in Japan and exchange wine-making technology.

Keizo Sato, president of Suntory, and Baron Eric de Rothschild, president of Château Lafite, signed the accord in a ceremony at the Imperial Hotel, then toasted each other with glasses of Château Lafite-Roth-

The changes also include creation of the post of senior corpo-rate officer for North America, reporting to the chairman. The appointment goes to Paul J. Col-lins, who has beaded the investment bank division, one of Citi-corp's three core businesses.

Other managerial changes include moving Thomas C. Theobald from head of Ciucorp's huge commercial banking business to take charge of its investment banking Richard S. Braddock, who has been in charge of Citicorp's domes-tic business with individuals and small businesses, will be responsible for such activities worldwide.

And Lawrence M. Small, who heads the commercial banking business for North America, is to succeed Mr. Theobald as head of all commercial banking.

Mr. Small, Mr. Braddock and

Mr. Collins also were elected to the boards of Citicorp and its chief subsidiary, Citibank.

Mr. Theobald, who also is a vice chairman at Citicorp, remains a member of the Citicorp and Citi-bank boards along with Citicorp's two other vice chairmen. Hans H. Angermueller and James D. Farley. Richard Kovacevitch, former head of Ciubank's international arm, now will "manage special projects, reporting directly to the chairman," the bank said. Mr. Kovacevitch, who remains a group executive, "was personally uncomfortable with some of these changes and so he was put on spe-cial assignment," Mr. Reed said. "But he doesn't want to leave and we don't want him to leave."

Analysts earlier had said that Mr. Reed had wanted Mr. Theobald to remain in a key position in Citicorp, even though he had been Mr. Reed's major competitor in the contest to succeed Walter B. Writson, the chairman who retired last (AP, Reuters, NYT)

U.S. House Votes Securities Rules

WASHINGTON - In an effort to prevent the kind of panic that disrupted savings institutions in Ohio and Maryland earlier this year, the U.S. House of Representatives voted Tuesday to extend federal regulation to all dealers in

The measure would create a a nine-member Government Securities Rulemaking Board under the Federal Reserve Board. It would target timated 100 securities dealers that currently are unregulated, requiring them to register with the Securities Exchange Commission. Similar legislation still must be considered in the Senate, and the Reagan administration has opposed the House measure, preferring to give the Treasury the regulatory power. Under current law, the Federal Reserve Ban which it directly buys and sells about $800 nance the national debt. However, about 100 of the estimated 400 secondary companies that also deal in securities by purchasing them from the primary dealers are unregulated The legislation was introduced in response to the failure of some of the secondary dealers, most notably ESM Government Securities. The collapse of the Florida-based company led to a run on an Ohio savings institution that had invested heavily in ESM and resulted in the temporary closing of 71 thrift institutions in the state. Maryland institutions suffered similar problems with the failure of New Jersey-based Bevill. Bresler & Scholman Asset Management Bevill, Bresler & Schulman Asset Management

Only last year the Chicago Mercantile Exchange launched its options on the Deutschemark and it quickly became the most actively exchange - traded currency option in the world.

And now, with CME's latest options on the British Pound and Swiss Franc, together with an interest rate option on the Eurodollar, corporate treasures, bankers and dealers have even greater flexibility in managing rate uncertainty.

Corporate treasurers use CME options as "insurance policies" against future rate fluctuations in hedging strategies, tender or takeover situations and as an insulation against translation exposures.

Leading banks, institutions and government dealers use CME options as an essential dealing and arbitrage tool to lay off foreign currency and interest rate risk. The high volume of CME options and the tight pricing which arises from the link between our options and futures contracts has enabled our customers to benefit from an improved and even more sophisticated service.

KUWAIT - A consortium of 31 Arab underwriters in-volved in insurance of the fleet of the United Arab Shipping Co. met Wednesday in Kuwait to consider premiums as a re-sult of Iran's recurrent seizures of the ships and confiscation of eargo, insurance sources said. The consortium, led by the Kuwait-based Gulf Insurance Co., was evaluating the escalating dangers to international navigation in Gulf waters and increasing financial losses resulting from Iran's detention of company ships.

Insurances sources disclosed that the 31 insurance compa-nies paid more than $500 mil-lion to the UASC in 1984 as compensation for the losses incurred by the company's fleet, mainly resulting from the spil-lovers of the fraq-fran war.

U.S. economy. But Mr. Hoover, who felt bound by his party's platform pledge, signed the SmootHawley legislation.

The economists were right about retailation from America's trading partners Britain France, Italy and partners. Britain, France, Italy and other nations raised tariffs or intro-duced quotas. Switzerland boycotted U.S. products. Canada raised its tariff walls to the highest in history. International conferences were held in 1931, 1932 and 1933 in an effort to work out a truce in the trade war. All those talks failed.

The higher U.S. trade barriers frustrated Tokyo's efforts to improve the economic conditions of the Japanese people through expanding trade. Japan turned to a more nationalistic and militant foreign policy.

The United States was worse off after Smoot-Hawley than it had been before. Its exports plunged because of the higher trade barriers and because of the spreading world depression, which was aggravated by the collapse of trade.

By 1932, U.S. exports had plummeted to about one-fourth of their 1929 level. Agriculture, the sector Hoover had tried to help, suffered which the most. Wheat exports, which had totaled $200 million 10 years earlier, slumped to $5 million in 1932. Auto exports fell from $541 million in 1929 to $76 million in

in manufactured goods is by no means limited to Japan. It comes from the newly industrialized nations of Asia — South Korea, Hong Kong, Singapore and Taiwan.

And as technology is rapidly diffused throughout the world, the threat also comes from many developing countries as well, ranging from Brazil to China, which is now making an enormous bid to take its place among the industrial nations. It is these strains that are now weighing on U.S. trade policy. Since the Reciprocal Trade Act of 1935, that policy has been based on the proposition that free and open trade is the best means of promoting the development of both the U.S. economy and the world.

Although economists still generally support free trade, they are beginning to take a more skeptical look at the doctrine in the light of present conditions.

Stephen V.O. Clarke, an economist who has served in senior posi-tions at the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, suggests that, "Free trade is designed to serve the self-interest of the nation that is indus-

One way of regarding the present surge of protectionist spirit, not only in Congress but also in U.S. industry, is that the United States has lost confidence that it is the industrial leader and needs to revert to a more aggressive and na-

Under this theory, Japan, as the emerging world leader, ought to embrace free trade. And indeed there are some signs that it is doing so, although some critics of Japan believe it has waited too long and her are deposited. has endangered an open world trading system by provoking U.S. resentment and protectionist spirit.

How great is the danger that the mood of protectionism will prevail in the United States? And, if it does, how great is the danger that the world economy would suffer the kind of shock that followed Smoot-Hawley? Robert J. Dole, Republican of Kansas and the Senate majority leader, says he has "never seen stronger sentiment" in Congress for restrictive trade legis-

But President Ronald Reagan, seeking to undercut congressional pressure for protectionism, has introduced a more aggressive policy to open foreign markets to U.S. goods. He has said he would initiate a series of investigations into "unfair trading practices" of Japan, the European Community, South Korea and Brazil. And it now seems likely that additional tough measures, intended to impress and appease Congress, will

It is too early to know whether the president's efforts to stanch protectionism, possibly reinforced by his veto power, will prevail -or whether his efforts to use tough means to redress the U.S. trade position will themselves become a form of protectionism.

THE UNWANTED: Refugees and the International Order in Europe

By Michael Marrus. 420 pages. $25. Oxford University Press, 200 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y. 10016.

Reviewed by Walter Laqueur

S UCCESSIVE waves of refugees were for a century a mirror of European history and for an even longer time of the history of America. Since time immemorial people have moved from one land to another, early on the Bible tells a story of one such migration. But, as Michael Marrus points out in his valuable new book, refugees as a category did not impinge on European consciousness and seldom troubled relations between states. Initially, the term referred to the Protestants expelled from France in the late 17th century; only later was it extended to all those who left their native country in times of distress.

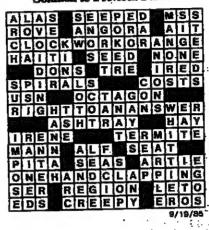

In the 19th century there were several waves of such emigration, mostly political: Germans leaving their country after the failed revolution of 1848 or Poles escaping Russian occupation.
Jews left Eastern Europe because they were persecuted and starved; there was a similar emigration wave from the Balkans. The southeastern European refugees are seldom remembered now, but they had a lasting social and political impact: If Andreas Papandreou is in power in Athens it is not unconnected with the fact that after World War I, 1.2 million Greeks had to leave Turkey. These absorption is making had to leave Turkey. Their absorption in main-land Greece was difficult and contributed to the radicalization of Greek politics.

On the whole, the attitude of 19th-century

Europe was more tolerant than in a later age. The Times of London could deride the Continental revolutionaries recently arrived as "wearing hats such as no one ever wore and hair where none should be." But no one was denied entry into Britain at the time, and there was no need for passports and visas, not only because there were not that many refugees but because the refugees were not considered a political or economic threat.

All this changed after World War I. More than a million Russians left their country after the revolution and an exodus followed the disintegration of the Ottoman and Austro-Hungarian empires. The situation of minorities in the successor states and Nazi persecution of Jews were further causes of the increasing stream of emigres for whom no refuge could be found. They found most doors closed: The Great Depression had caused mass unemployment and it was feared that a further influx would cause disaster. Countries once known for offering asylum declared that the "lifeboat was full," in the memorable words of a Swiss minister of the interior in 1942.

True, France received 250,000 Spanish Ropublicans after the defeat of the republic in 1939, on condition that most of them would. move on Britain accepted some 50,000 German and Austrian Jews in the months before the war. But the great majority of those who wanted to emigrate could not do so, and many perished. America, which had been built by refugees, behaved as badly as or worse than other countries. other countries.

One of the few rays of hope in the interware period was the establishment by the League of Nations of a High Commission for Reingress of Nations of National Nati While it did a great deal of good in the years after World War I, its resources were insufficient to cope with the greater problems of the

The fate of the refugees after World War. H. The fate of the refugees after World War, it is still vividly remembered. At one time, or another some 80 million had been on the move and as the war ended there were hope population exchanges" (often a emphanism for some thing more unpleasant). Many went on to the United States and other countries, millions stayed in Europe. So great was the resilience and absorptive capacity of the old continent that by the late 1950s work and shelter had been found for most of them.

Nevertheless, Marrus is perhaps a little over ly optimistic in claiming that Europe's refuge-problem has been solved. This is certainly not problem has been solved. This is certainly live true with regard to the absorption of Algerians in France, and there have been growing problems with new immigrants in Bratam and the "guest workers" (above all Turks) in West Germany. Were these people refugees? Most did not leave their countries because they were persecuted for political or other reasons but because they wanted a better life. This is now a major political issue facing European govern. major pointers issue rating constitution, alone, ments. In this respect there is not the slightest in this respect there is not the slightest difference between conservatives and liberals, socialists and communists in Europe. Inspired by rock music, they may give generous donations to refugees, but they do not want them in their bomes. Matured Mandlikova Finally Checks In at the Top

By John Feinstein
Washington Pour Service
NEW YORK — On the surface, the similarities between Hana Mandlikova and Ivan Lendl are striking. Both are Czechoslovakian citizens who spend much of their time living in the United States. Both are major talents whose ability to live up to their potential has been questioned in the past. Both play tennis right-handed and golf left-handed. Both, too, are U.S. Open champions, the products of a small country that has pro-duced some of the great tennis talents of this century: Jaroslav Drobny and Martina Navratilova, Lendl and Mandlikova.

But one man who has had a tremendous influence on tennis in Czechoslovakia in the last 15 years often is overlooked: Jan Kodes. He was a Wimbledon champion, in 1973, but that was during the professional players' boycott. He also was a two-time U.S. Open finalist and a French Open champion. It was his success, as much as anything, that inspired such young players as Lendl and Mandlikova.

He was the big hero because of what he did," : Aandlikova said. "He helped make tennis very popular in our country. It was always popular before, but much more after Kodes. People knew of Drobny but he defected, so it was different. It was Kodes that people always talked about," Now, it will be Mandlikova and Lendi talk about. For each, the road to the they talk about. For each, the road to the U.S. Open title was a difficult one. Mandlikova was supposed to take over women's tennis when she won two Grand Slam tournaments, the French and Australian opens, before she reached the age of 20. Lendl was in the top three in the world by 21, yet never rose to be No. l.

"I think I appreciate this championship much more than the French," Mandlikova reflected after beating Navratilova in the final of the recent U.S. Open. "Then, I won just on talent. It seemed so easy — I was just out there free as a bird playing. For this one, I had to suffer and put in a lot of hard work.

"It's hard for people to understand that," said Mandlikova, "for someone like me, coming on tour was completely different than if I was an American. When I first played here in 1978, I was 16 and I beat JoAnne Russell, who was a very good player. But I still had to go home to play in juniors because if I didn't win I couldn't travel outside the country. It was hard for me because I didn't soeak the language and me because I didn't speak the language and I couldn't just play all the time the way an American girl could if she was good. But I learned from it."

Mandlikova, 23, is almost six years younger than Navratilova. She remembers being a 12-year-old ball girl for Navratilova and admiring her attacking style. But, unlike Navratilova, she and Lendi have not

"Martina is an American," Mandlikova said. "If you read her book, you know that. She thinks now as an American and I think that is O.K., it is good for her. I am a Czech; I love my country, I love being able to go home to see my family.

"But I know there is more in the world. I couldn't live there now because I have seen other places. I have my freedom to travel and to do what I want. I do not think they [the government] want me to have a prob-

The Czechoslovak government, according to people in tennis, has an arrangement with Mandlikova and Lendl: They are free to live where they want, play where they want and make as much money as they want. In return, they don't defect and they agree to play on national teams.

Mandlikova says she feels intensely Czechoslovakian when she watches her country compete in sports. "This year, 1 was watching the ice hockey team play in the World Cup against the Russians," she said. "I was going crazy, partly because I love hockey but also because it was the Russians. When we won, all I could do was jump and say, 'Yay!'

When Lendl speaks about his new home be lives in Connecticut, Mandlikova in Florida — he gets emotional. Mandlikova is not the same way. "Ivan is different than I am," she said. "I like it bere. I like the people very much, but I also love Europe. There are things there you cannot find here. But Ivan really loves it here. He loves everything about it. I'm a little more old-fashioned. I like small res-

Europe."

Both have matured here. Since her emergence in 1981, Mandlikova has been pres-sured to challenge Navratilova and Chris Evert Lloyd for the No. 1 spot in women's tennis. At times, she says, the pressure was almost unbearable. Now, feeling more comfortable with herself, with other players and with tennis, the U.S. Open title may be a first major step toward the top spot.

"I feel like all the work paid off for me," she said. "When I first played tennis"—at the age of 9—"I always thought I would never play it past 16. But I started winning championships and my father kept telling me I could be the best. That always kept

Was there a turning point? "My brother [William, who is 27] told me at Wimbledon it was time to get a haircut and get rid of the headband, that it was old-fashioned," she said. "I just decided he was right, it was time." It had to be coincidence, but with her new cut she has found new consistency.

"At this point in my life, I don't play tennis for the money," she said. "When I had the 6-0 lead in the last tie breaker against Martina, people were cheering so loud I had to remind myself the match wasn't over.

"Then, I choked on a volley at 6-1. I just choked, very simply. But when I hit the next volley and won, I was lying on the floor and all I could think was, 'I won the U.S. Open, I did it, I really did it."

Retrial Sought in Tulane Bribery Case

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - District Attorney Harry Connick will ask a Louisiana appeals court to let him again try former Tulane baskerball star John Williams on sports bribery charges, Connick's office announced

Charges were dismissed against Williams last month when District Judge Alvin Oser ruled prosecutors had deliberately tried to provoke a mistrial in order to get a new start on a case that was going badly. Connick contends that while his assistants may have violated some of Oser's orders, they did so unwittingly.

Connick's office said the appeal was to be filed Wednesday in the state's 4th Circuit Court of Appeal, which Connick is asking to overturn Oser's ruling and permit him to bring Williams up for trial again.

Williams was accused of three counts of conspiracy and two counts of taking bribes to control the outcome of basketball games last season against Southern Mississippi and Memphis State.

'Alex' Wasted by Sewage

By Judith Miller New York Times Service

A LEXANDRIA, Egypt — Each year, wealthy and middle-class Cairenes flock to Alexandria to escape Cairo's burning desert heat for the cooler, humid breezes of the Mediterranean. Alexandria's population ordinarily grows from three million people to about five million in the summer, especially on the Fridays and Saturdays, Egypt's weekend.

Usually, by midday it seems that every speck of sand is shielded by contiguous beach umbrellas. The 45-mile-long (72-kilometer) Corniche, the broad boulevard along the coast, is jammed with cars, motorcycles, donkey-drawn carts and beach-bound pedestrians. Hundreds of thousands of children play

But this year the Corniche is navigable even during the 2 P.M. rush hour, when Alexandrians leave their offices for lunch and nap. Hotels are offering weekend packages to lure customers away from Cyprus, the favorite summe haunt this year. Reservations are no longer required even at the most popular restaurants. The beaches, by Alexandria standards, are de-

While reliable figures are hard to come by, travel agents estimate that the summer tourist influx plunged from a usual peak of 2 million to about 500,000.

The main culprit in the decline was pollution. Alexandria is one of the few Mediterranean cities that still pumps raw sewage into the sea close to its shores. The effects have been painfully evident this year, even to the most devoted fans of "Alex," as the city is sometimes "All of a sudden, Alexandria's sewage problem has become a national problem," said Ahmed Baha el-Din, a columnist for the semiofficial Cairo daily al-Ahram. "The sewage that now covers Montazah, Aida and the other aristocratic heaches has been there for months. so why all this sudden fuss?

"Because Cairenes, the first-class Egyptians, traveled to Alex for their summer vacations! That's

The sewage scandal was widely cited as a major cause of the recent cabinet shuffle. Commentators said the problem had highlighted the government's indecisiveness and inability to solve urgent prob-

In late August, prominent mem-bers of the Alexandria Yacht Club complained to local officials of "the presence of sewage on their private beach," reported al-Shaab, an opposition weekly, several of whose editors and senior reporters own or rent apartments in Alex, as does Baha el-Din.

"If this situation continues," a prominent physician complained,
"Alexandria could experience not only serious economic problems, but health hazards as well."

Al-Shaab reported, and several doctors confirmed, that many children who have swum in the ocean this summer have contracted unusual skin rashes and intestinal ail-

"We're seeing disorders that we haven't ever seen before bere," said a doctor who teaches at Alexandria University's medical college.

The local government of Alexandria, whose economy is heavily dependent on the annual summer invasion, has been eager to escape blame. A convenient scapegoat has been found: the United States.

In late August, al-Ahaly, another Cairo-based opposition newspa-per, asserted that the Council of Alexandria had formally protested to Washington the delay in completing a long-planned, desperately needed "waste water" project at a cost of nearly $1.5 billion. American officials in Cairo said they did not know of any such protest. They acknowledged, however, that the project had been delayed for at least four years, partly by a dispute between Egypt and the United States over several issues.

Still, Alexandrians blame Washington less than their government for the city's plight. Specifically, many point to Alexandria's governor general, Fawzi Maaz, a former intelligence chief who was in deep political trouble even before the sewage crisis became a national scandal. Several Alexandrians predicted that not only would Maaz lose his post, national politicians who defended him might also fall.

NEW YORK — Susan Ro-sen's right arm is in a sling. She pulled some muscles in her shoulder and elbow recently when, while trying to enforce a court order, she escorted a woman into the Long Island home that the woman had once shared with her estranged husband.

"Suddenly he appeared." Ro-sen recalled. "He was enraged, and he lifted me off the ground and threw me against a door." Irene Greenberg recently drove from Brooklyn to a motel in New Jersey. She sat in her car and waited until the man she was following came out of a motel room with a woman who was not his wife, Greenberg took photo-

"The guy is now divorced," she

Alice Byrne recently checked out a man who drove a BMW, lived in a beautiful apartment and had told his well-to-do fiancee that he had a good job. It turned out that the BMW was his brother's, the apartment belonged to someone else and he was unemployed.
"The wedding didn't take place," said Byrne. These three women, all in their early 40s, are among the growing number of women earning livings as private investigators, once one of the most masculine of fields.

Susan Rosen

Although the profession is still predominantly male, more and more women have entered the ranks in recent years, according to John F. Manula, president of As-sociated Licensed Detectives of New York State, based in Hempstead, New York. He said 15 to 20 percent of the organization's 450 members were women. There are 984 private detectives licensed by New York State.

Matula added that, including unlicensed investigators who work for a licensed agency -- a legal practice, as long as the investigators are fingerprinted about 30 percent of the total are analyst for Trans World Airlines and has two teen-age children. She is national chairman of Child Find Inc., a group that tries to find lost children, and president of Women Business Owners of New York, a mine-year-old group with 550 members.

To reach Irene Greenberg's office, one must walk through a Video U. S. A. store in Brooklyn, then two adjacent offices. The store is not a front: Greenberg and her partner, James P. Brown, guards. Her chief investigator is Michael Marino, 42, a retired New York police detective. She a former city policeman, have an interest in Video U.S.A. and much of their work involves investigating counterfeit videosaid 40 percent of her work was for corporations, 40 percent was

The firm also supplies security guards for two New York disco-theques, Studio 54 and the Palladium. But most of Greenberg's work is "domestic," meaning marital investigations. She charges a $10,000 retainer. "I work mainly for affluent people, and I don't work for less," she

Greenberg, who took over the agency from her husband in 1978 after he went into another line of work, told of one "domestic" she had in Baton Rouge, Louisiana, where her agents trailed a man's mistress for two years.

"He felt that if he was giving her money to live on, she should not be with anyone else," she said. Finally, he left his wife and married her." In her most distressing case, a man killed himself after Greenberg confirmed his suspicions that his wife was unfaithful. Greenberg, who has two chil-dren, said she thought women had one big advantage over men as investigators: "No one ever expects a woman to be a private Susan Rosen is a former model solving a marital case by station-ing ber parents, her daughter and her dog at various exits of a motel. The woman involved had eluded previous investigators by arriving at the motel and disappearing. Rosen discovered that she was slipping out a side door and getting into a car with her boyfriend. In another surveillance case,

Rosen and her three children once spent New Year's Eve in her sta-tion wagon parked behind an apartment house. "We ate fried chicken, drank sodas and had a good time," she said. "When a cop came by around 2 A. M., I told him I was waiting for my husband." Rosen, who earns $40,000 to $50,000 a year, said she had been on cases in Canada, California and the Caribbean. Her work has involved insurance fraud and child custody. She has also served subpoenas.
